

WOMEN OF DENVER

Photo by: Jennifer Olson Photography

“When you’re a high achiever who’s done the inner work, set and exceeded goals, and know exactly who you are as a leader, it makes sense that you’re searching for something more than the rigid, traditional framework of corporate leadership in your next chapter,” says Alecia Wellen.

A Wall Street professional since 1999, she’s got up-close-and-personal experience with the heavy weight of success, and that’s exactly why today, she’s showing up as a guide and certified coach for other professionals who are longing for something deeper.

Described by her clients as a solid mix of Wall Street and Reiki Master, Alecia works alongside high-achieving business owners, executives, and women entrepreneurs in 1:1 and group coaching formats, equipping them to find something more aligned by embarking upon an inward journey. It’s here, she says, that they’re able to move past leadership development clichés, break cycles and find transformative success.

“It can be lonely at the top, and it’s scary when you set out on your own self-discovery,” she says. “My Crown to Root program offers the space and the framework for individualized coaching exploration – and you’re doing it alongside others who are committed to the same journey. Whether it’s private coaching or a group experience, my clients are always in the driver’s seat. They’re making an investment in themselves, so it’s always about what they need, where they’re going, and who they’re becoming next.”

AW
ALECIA WELLEN
COACHING